South Carolina.

[From the New York Herald.]

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 22, 1876.
Governor Chamberlain's assertion that the State is like an armed camp has been verified. Troops have been pouring in from North Carolina, Virginia, New York, Maine and Massachusetts for the past day or two. They are mainly concentrated at this point, and the city now assumes an aspect of war, not at all unlike the occupation by General Sherman in 1865. The streets, the hotels, saloons and the high-ways are filled with them. All the officers of the war have been requested to appear in public in full uniform, and while the whole matter is far from the extreme, the political effect of it among the negroes is seen in the swag and bravado they now assume. It has gone far from them that the troops have been sent here for their special protection, to see that the State goes for Hayes and Wheeler and Chamberlain, and the formidable display of the force and power of the national government, consolidated the negro republicans and intimidated the class of them who have gone over to Hampton.

Assuring feature of the military occupation was related to the evening. The companies from New York were packed off suddenly that they believed an actual war existed to the State, and some expected the train to be fired into as soon as they crossed the South Carolina line. So confident were they of this that ammunition was issued to the men and they were held in readiness for a fight at any moment. The black astonishment can best be realized in this general expression among them, that the political excitement in New York is much greater than anything they have witnessed since their arrival.

Had the election taken place to-morrow there is little doubt that Hampton would be elected by a heavy majority, but it is impossible to conjecture the result on the 7th of November, on account of the political effect of the military on the colored democrats. The action of the President in granting Gov. Chamberlain's request for troops, without demanding an application from the Legislature, as prescribed by the constitution, has caused considerable comment in political circles here. The election prior to the last armed outbreak in the State before the Chamberlain's proclamation, took place on the same day the President issued his proclamation. It occurred on the 19th of September, and in a week everything was quiet. Twelve days elapsed between the issuance of Governor Chamberlain's proclamation and that of the President, with easy communication between all parts of the State. The reason why the Legislature was not convened in special session is a matter of speculation. The generally conceived opinion is that the Governor felt the Legislature would not sustain his application for troops. Information I have collected informally from different parts of the State leads me irresistibly to the same conclusion. One-fourth of the members are democrats, and a large number of republicans are still smarting under the abuse and contumely they experienced at the hands of the Governor in his attempt to create a one man power. Many others, like the entire Judiciary of the State, are willing to testify to the existence of perfect peace in their respective counties. This is why Gov. Chamberlain did not, in conformity with the constitutional requirement, convene the Legislature. He knew his demand for troops would not be sustained by that body, intensely republican as it is, and he was too shrewd to risk the experiment of calling it together at this crisis. These facts furnish conclusive proof that the proclamations and the troops are but part of a conspiracy of the Governor to carry the State for himself and the national republican ticket. Both parties are still actively engaged in the canvass. On Saturday 2,000 democrats, mounted, appeared in a democratic procession at Graniteville, and on the same day 800 republicans, mounted, in procession attended a republican meeting at Watkinson. Last week at a republican meeting at Darlington, engineered by Whittemore, of cadetship fame, a company of colored men, armed and equipped, rode in the line, while another company appeared in full uniform. The whites have all yielded peaceful submission to the command to disarm their clubs, but no steps have been taken to disarm the negroes, who still parade with arms furnished by the State. As I have before said, the negroes of South Carolina are by no means as docile and peaceable as they have been represented. While unable to cope with the whites in actual conflict they are impulsive and can easily be aroused to frenzy. It is possible and under control of insurrectionary leaders, they are, when aroused and armed, a standing menace. It is a notorious fact that while arrests of whites are made by the federal authorities the agencies of the State courts are invoked when blacks are arrested. This is done to impress the blacks with the belief that the troops are to be used solely against the whites.

Notwithstanding the troops and all the paraphernalia of war which he has occasioned in the State, the Governor still continues to weaken. I have it as coming directly from him that he would give $100,000 to get out of the position he now occupies politically, and he would give $100,000 to escape all the vituperation and abuse that is being heaped upon him.

AUGUST, GA., Oct. 22, 1876.
General Hampton, in a speech at Aiken, told the people to offer no resistance to arrest, but to submit quietly to everything. If United States soldiers are ordered to fire upon the people the latter must not resist, but bare their breasts and be willing to die for the good of the country. The people are determined upon a peaceful victory and must give no pretext to their enemies to find the slightest grounds for the charges made.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 22, 1876.
The reign of terror in the low country continues, and the few whites who live there are in momentary terror of their lives. The massacre at Canby has emboldened the negroes, and yesterday evening a band of about 400 of the militia, armed with State guns, and supposed to be the same men who were engaged in the Canby massacre, marched into the village of Mount Pleasant and uttered loud threats regarding the inhabitants and burning the place. They rushed through the streets firing their muskets and shouting "Remember Canby."

boy." There are about forty white citizens in the town and about fifty colored democrats. These collected together, armed themselves as best they could, moved all the women and children into one house and made preparations to defend them. A steamer, lying at the wharf, was got ready to bring the women and children to the city, which is about two miles distance from Mount Pleasant. The white and colored democrats—against the latter of whom loud threats were made by the negroes—remained on guard all night, and the republicans, finding that they were determined to make a stand, did not carry out their intention.

They left for the swamps about daylight, threatening to return soon and burn the village. They killed the men and out of what was this statement is a literal relation of what was witnessed by a Herald reporter, and is not in the least exaggerated. Many of the negroes were those implicated in the Canby massacre.

The attack upon the town was caused by the report that a colored democratic meeting was to be held there. Not one of the negroes implicated in the Canby massacre, although the Sheriff, who is their leader, knows them all. A meeting of the citizens of Mount Pleasant was held to-day, and a committee was appointed to go to Columbia, wait on General Ruger and ask for a company of federal troops to be stationed there. The negroes in this section outnumber the whites over two to one, and since the Canby massacre have become perfectly outrageous. Unless the government sends troops many white men and women and colored democrats will be murdered.

It was announced in all the white churches to-day that Thursday, the 26th, would be observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer for the success of the movement for good government.

At Summerville, twenty miles from this city, on Saturday, an attempt was made by negroes to outrage the little daughter of the band master of the First United States artillery, stationed at that point. No arrests have been made as yet.

The troops in camp at Canby report everything quiet. The negroes have not yet come to the village.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 22, 1876.
Riotous demonstrations of negroes, generally supposed to be the result of the Canby affair, are reported from various points of Charleston county.

A serious demonstration of negroes at Mount Pleasant village, opposite Charleston, is causing great alarm to the white residents, who will petition General Ruger for troops.
